Washington's Day
Have We Outgrown Him?
An English Tribute
They Pulled Her Head Off

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY [illegible] us that we have grown [illegible] need his advice. He urged [illegible] out of European entanglements. Uncle Sam is in Europe's [illegible] now up to his armpits.

[illegible] will soon be in the League [illegible].

[illegible] to England humbly request that he be allowed to build [illegible] ships, and England says no. [illegible] now America is considering [illegible] agreement under which we should [illegible] to defend France in case [illegible] attacked by some European [illegible].

[illegible] shall have foreign judges [illegible] League Court giving us orders.

* * *

[illegible] used to speak his mind. [illegible] His commanding officer, [illegible], was killed near what is [illegible] because he foolishly [illegible] French and Indian fighters, [illegible] them in the forest with English "regulars."

Washington, who got four bullets [illegible] wrote soon after the [illegible]: "The dastardly behavior of [illegible] so-called regulars exposed all [illegible] to almost certain death, and at [illegible] ran as sheep pursued by [illegible]."

* * *

WHAT would Washington say to [illegible] American leaders now forfeiting [illegible] independence which he won, submitting to British approval our right [illegible] national defense?

He might well put his comment in [illegible] words, as: "Are you bought, or [illegible] you cowards, that you can not do [illegible] 120,000,000 men what I did with [illegible] than 4,000,000 men?"

The truthful answer would be, "A [illegible], both, something of the [illegible] and some indirect buying, by [illegible] bankers."

It is customary to eulogize Washington on his birthday and forget him between birthdays.

Washington being out of fashion [illegible] modern American "statesmen," [illegible] praise of him from an [illegible].

"How grateful the relief which the [illegible] of mankind, the lover of virtue [illegible], when, turning from the contemplation of such a character (Napoleon) [illegible] eye rests upon the greatest [illegible] our own or of any age! * * * [illegible] be the duty of the historian [illegible] sage, in all ages, to omit no [illegible] of commemorating this illustrious man; and until time shall be [illegible] will a test of the progress [illegible] race has made in wisdom [illegible] be derived from the veneration [illegible] the immortal name of [illegible]."

[illegible] what you might call a [illegible].

[illegible] British had in their history [illegible] man as Washington, they [illegible] scorn his advice. Even [illegible] him, they know enough to [illegible] their own affairs and do not [illegible] to us, asking permission [illegible] build a ship.

[illegible] leave that to modern self [illegible] American imitations of Washington. It is almost enough to make [illegible] think it was Washington's English blood, not his American birth, [illegible] and surroundings, that made [illegible] he was.

* * *

ASIDE from all that, there is, [illegible] one exception, nothing in the [illegible] interfere with your enjoyment of a Washington holiday, in [illegible] that thinks it has outgrown [illegible].

[illegible] one piece of news makes unpleasant reading. Mrs. Dugan, not [illegible] killed an Arizona rancher. [illegible] rather old. The defense said [illegible] given to change and planned [illegible] Mrs. Dugan off his ranch, [illegible] a younger woman from [illegible].

[illegible] are touchy about such [illegible], especially as the years creep [illegible]. Mrs. Dugan killed him.

[illegible] Arizona killed her. She [illegible] and with the rope around [illegible] smiled and shook hands with [illegible] about to kill her.

[illegible] could say for the woman that [illegible] and rage probably made her [illegible] irresponsible.

What can you say for the "civilized" that choked her and pulled [illegible] head?

* * *

MR. COOLIDGE, invited by William Wrigley (guess what industry he controls), is exploring Catalina [illegible].

He will see big fish in the sea, [illegible] barracuda that would bite [illegible] off. On high mountains are [illegible], planted there by Spaniards [illegible]. Norris, La Follette and [illegible] would seem tame compared [illegible].

And there is gold in these hills, [illegible] and copper.

* * *

* * *

Lord Westbury jumped out of the window and killed himself in London yesterday. His son and heir was killed recently. Superstition calls Westbury the eleventh victim of the Tut-Ankh-Amen curse.

His son took part in opening the tomb.

2 MORE CANDIDATES ENTER PRIMARY RACE

Commissioner McCurdy and Representative Cookston Out for Reelection

O. C. McCurdy, member of the board of county commissioners, and Horace W. Cookston, Marion county representative to the general assembly, will be candidates for reelection, according to announcements made by them today.

McCurdy is now serving a short term created by the death of the late J. N. Rexroth. He took office in December, 1928, and his term will expire at the end of this year. McCurdy is the only member of the board of commissioners who will be required to enter the campaign for reelection.

Both McCurdy and Cookston are Republicans and are thus far the only candidates to enter the race for commissioner and state representative.

Mr. Cookston was elected to the legislature two years ago. He previously served in the lower house of the general assembly and was returned two years ago after an absence of several years.

The entrance of McCurdy and Cookston into the political arena placed 13 in the campaign with the primaries more than five months away.

Boy, 12, Sought in Holdup at Columbus

COLUMBUS, Feb. 22—A 12-year-old boy, believed to be one of the youngest bandits ever wanted here in connection with a holdup, is being sought by Columbus police today.

The youthful robber, and his companion, who was about 22 years old, entered a confectionery here last night, and while the elder covered Charles L. Kibler with a gun, the little fellow rifled the cash register of $20 in a most business-like fashion.

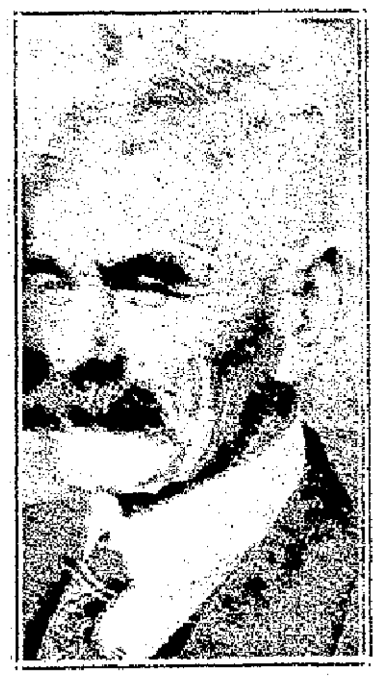
No customer was in the store at the time.

Jones Ill and Must Return to America

LONDON, Feb. 22—Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, one of the chief naval advisers to the American naval conference delegation, is suffering from ulcers of the stomach and while his condition is not serious, he will be forced to return home immediately, it was learned today. Admiral Jones will sail on the first available boat next week.

Iberia History Tells of College Days And of Lost Opportunity for Railway

Pictured above at the left is the Iberia grade school building, which stands partially on the site of the old college at Iberia. This building is said by some to be the old seminary founded by Preacher Rainey. Above at the right is a view of the main street of the village. Below at the right is C. C. Vannatta, former Morrow county clerk of courts and a former student at Iberia college.



Galion Benefited When Big Four Dropped Marion County Educational Center from Route; Now Iberia Has Neither College Nor Railroad

BY EDNA S. DUTTON
State Editor, The Star

WHAT the endless ribbon-like highways are to the cities and villages today the railroads were to the towns and hamlets of more than half a century ago. When the railroads went, there went the business and the customers also.

To the average town or hamlet the prospect of getting a railroad line through its vicinity was an event to be proud of, for it meant the prospect of at least growth and perhaps the acquiring of industries.

While this may have been the attitude of most towns, it was not, according to some authorities, the attitude of the inhabitants of the hamlet of Iberia, at the time the Big Four railroad decided to lay its tracks in the vicinity.

The village at that time was thriving and boasted not only of a bustling business enterprise but also of a cultural atmosphere. While many of the male inhabitants of the town earned a comfortable living through their work at the tannery, the place

FORMER MARIONITE DIES IN AIR CRASH

Richard Spicer and Instructor Burned to Death in 200-Foot Drop of Plane at Chicago

The crash of an airplane from an altitude of 200 feet in Chicago yesterday afternoon claimed the lives of two men, one a former Marion youth.

Richard R. Spicer, formerly of Marion, who was riding in the ship as a student pilot, died with his instructor, Capt. Joseph Donnellan, as flames destroyed the plane after it crashed to the earth. The men were burned to death before the eyes of attendants at the flying field who were unable to go near the plane due to the intense heat.

The cause of the accident was to be determined today at a coroner's inquest, the jury of which was to be composed entirely of aviators.

Wartime Aviator

Captain Donnellan, the instructor, was a wartime aviator with the Canadian royal flying force. The instructor and Spicer had been in the ship only a short time. They had circled the field at an altitude of about 500 feet, then dipped to 200 feet. The plane suddenly dived to the ground, buried its motor in the earth and burst into flames.

Spicer was born in Union county Sept. 27, 1904. His parents were Ray Spicer and Myrtle Clark Spicer. Two years after his birth his parents moved to Marion. In 1912 his parents and a brother died.

At the age of 15 he enlisted in the navy and was stationed in California. After serving his enlistment he lived in California with a family by the name of King. He adopted this name and was known as Richard King in Chicago where he was killed.

In November, 1924, he was married to Augusta [illegible], who with two children survive. A number of relatives live in Marion and Marion county. William Spicer, 461 Park st., is a grandfather. Other relatives are C. E. Spicer, 456 East George st., Mrs. John Brunner, 272 East Mark st., Mrs. Jesse Warrick, Benton Place, Mrs. H. L. Newlove, Uncapher av., and Mrs. James Mullins, Marion. A brother, Robert Spicer, lives in Chicago.

Funeral arrangements are being made in Chicago.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sebring, both of Delaware county. On Oct. 5, 1910, she was married to Mr. Netter. She was a member of Central Christian church.

Surviving Mrs. Netter are three children, Helen and Martha, at home, and a son, Robert Netter, in the U. S. Navy stationed at New York harbor. Two sisters, Mrs. Charles Swank, of Mansfield, and Mrs. John Spearman, of Gillette, Ark., are living.

OVER CAREY ROUTE

Three New Cars To Be Added for Operation of Extension

Permission for an extension of the Maag Bros. bus line from Carey to Toledo was granted by the state utilities commission, it is learned in Columbus yesterday, officials of the company [illegible] today.

RETURN OF BRIAND AIDS MEET OUTLOOK

Delegates See Chance That Reduction Goal of Parley May Be Achieved

LONDON, Feb. 22—The news that Aristide Briand would return to the London naval conference as head of the French delegation if M. Chautemps' cabinet is accepted by the chamber of deputies struck an optimistic note in conference circles today.

Many delegates viewed the return of the great statesman in a leading rather than secondary role, as a loophole through which the parley might be reverted to its original purpose—reduction.

M. Tardieu had demanded naval tonnage of approximately 725,000 tons by 1936 and thereby caused all to realize that the most to be hoped for from the conference negotiations was limitation which would lay the basis for actual reduction in the future.

With M. Briand at the parley representing a left wing group avid for naval reduction, however, hope was felt that the conference would accomplish the original purpose of President Hoover and Premier MacDonald after all.

February Heat Sets Record

Yesterday Warmest in 40 Years, Weather Observer Reports

MARION was hotter yesterday than it has been on any February day here in the last 40 years, according to Dr. M. B. Haffensperger, local weather observer.

The mercury cleared all previous high marks by one degree when it shot to a peak of 69 degrees. On a number of balmy February days, in which the city has felt a prelude of spring weather, Marionites have seen the thermometers standing at 68 degrees, but never before at 69, Dr. Haffensperger declares.

Yesterday should have found a shameful blush on the countenance of every groundhog who showed his face on Feb. 2, groundhog day, and returned to his winter quarters after predicting six weeks more of winter.

* * *

"RELIEF" from a week of [illegible] weather is expected to arrive Sunday with colder weather predicted by officials, forecasters. Showers and cloudy weather are expected tonight and Sunday.

Some sections of the state are fearing damage to prematurely budding fruit trees which have so developed that they may be "nipped" by a possible later cold wave.

Fruit trees were not the only things to bud yesterday under the influence of a warm sun. Yesterday afternoon found Fred Lutz, veteran North Main st. grocer, winning the honor of wearing the first straw hat to be worn in Marion this year. Hundreds of Marionites saw Mr. Lutz garbed in a Panama sitting on a chair in front of his store.

CONALD SAYS HANNAH STORY IS NOT TRUTH

Charges Friend Could Not Have Killed Melvin at Stated Time

OFFICIALS BAFFLED

Plan To Quiz Admitted Slayer, Son Again This Afternoon

WOOSTER, Feb. 22—Wayne county officials were more baffled than ever today concerning the 14-month-old mystery of Melvin Horst.

Their perplexity was increased when Carl Conald made the statement that it would have been impossible for Hannah to have killed the boy in the manner and at the time he described in his last "confession" Wednesday.

This most recent thunderbolt was hurled into the investigating machinery after a three-hour quiz of Conald by his attorneys and Sheriff Carl Shearer. The officials are baffled, and their next move in the most confounding murder mystery in the annals of Ohio is undecided.

To Question Junior

Special Assistant Prosecutor Walter J. Mougey and Detective Ora Slutz went to the Wayne county children's home today to further question Junior Hannah, the 10-year-old son of the confessed 61-year-old slayer, whose statements and contradictions have been as baffling to officials as those of his father.

Prosecutor Marion Graven and his staff of investigators were expected to resume the grilling of Hannah this afternoon, although they are as exhausted as the prisoner from the almost-incessant hammering away at Hannah and Conald for 10 days.

Conald, who was exonerated by Hannah of any connection with the disappearance of the Orrville boy on the night of Dec. 27, 1928, declared that he called at Hannah's home about 5:30 p. m. that day, and they went to the garage for a drink of whisky.

They remained at the garage only about 20 minutes, Conald said, and returned to Hannah's home staying there until 9 o'clock. This statement repudiates Hannah's "confession" that Junior took the Horst boy to the garage about 6:30 and turned him over to his father and Conald.

Did Not See Melvin

Conald further declared that he did not see Melvin at the garage, and said Hannah could not have committed the crime he confessed unless he (Conald) had known about it.

Hannah, in his first "confession," accused a joint suspect, Earl Conald, with the killing of the innocent little boy. Conald, likewise in custody for investigation, claimed Hannah was the slayer of Melvin. Hannah, in subsequent "confessions," alleged Conald had buried the body, first telling officers the body was in one place, and later advising them it was in another place. It was never found.

Finally, Hannah, in what appeared to be his real confession, admitted the killing and absolved Conald. At the same time he declared he had bartered Melvin's body after he had brutally battered him near the barn with a two-by-four—to two alleged Akron bootleggers—for 25 gallons of bootleg whisky. He claimed he didn't know what disposition was made of the body.

Didn't Know Italians

In another "confession" yesterday, Hannah admitted he didn't even know the two Italians whom he had implicated in his crime. They were then released.

Hannah was vigorously grilled again, but if he made any more "confessions," the weary investigators had not made them public today.

The 61-year-old Orrville man has assumed all responsibility for the cruel slaying. But despite his divers "confessions," the problem still is:

Where is the body of Melvin Horst?

CLEVELAND, Feb. 22—Police were on the alert here today ready to break up any attempted demonstration on the part of unemployed men and women.

Marion Theater To Show "Hollywood Revue" Sunday, While Palace Will Do "Dangerous Paradise" and Ross Players Will Appear in "Won by Waiting"

A PICTURE that has long been awaited, "The Hollywood Revue," is ready to make its appearance here this week. It opens Sunday and runs through Tuesday at the Marion. "The Love Racket," with Dorothy Mackaill, is scheduled at the same theater Wednesday and Thursday.

The Palace will have "Dangerous Paradise" Sunday and Monday and the following three days will show Winnie Lightner in "She Couldn't Say No."

WINNIE LIGHTNER

"Hollywood Revue" Has Many Stars in Action

"THE HOLLYWOOD REVUE" is the typical revue in talking pictures, according to advance information. Conrad Nagel and Jack Benny serve as masters of ceremony and during the program introduce Marion Davies, John Gilbert, Norma Shearer, William Haines, Joan Crawford, Buster Keaton, Bessie Love, Charles King, Marie Dressler, Gus Edwards, [illegible] and Edwards, Laurel and Hardy, Ukelele Ike, Anita Page, Polly Moran, Gwen Lee, the Brox Sisters, Albertina Rasch ballet, the Rounders and Natacha Natrova and Company. The production has many big revue scenes, some with sequences done in color. It's from this picture that the popular and muchly-heard "Singing in the Rain" comes.

Done on the stage as "The Woman on the Jury," "The Love Racket" features Dorothy Mackaill, Sidney Blackmer, Alice Day, Myrtle Stedman, Edmund Burns and others. The picture, partially dialogue, tells of a woman betrayed by a man who later serves on a jury that is trying a murder case against a young woman. It develops that the man who was shot by the girl was the same one who had betrayed the first woman. The climax is the recital of the woman's story before the other 11 jurors.

"Dangerous Paradise" Features Arlen, Oland, Carroll

SET in the tropical atmosphere of the South Seas the story of "Dangerous Paradise" traces the love affair of Nancy Carroll, a musician in a hotel orchestra, and Richard Arlen, embittered recluse, through a series of intense adventures. Menaced by her employers Nancy flees to Arlen's lonely little island, falls in love with its solitary inhabitant, and by persistence, devotion and, finally, a sacrifice, wins his love in return.

In the cast, in addition to Arlen and Miss Carroll, are Warner Oland, Francis McDonald, George Kotsonaros and others.

Winnie Lightner, long a vaudeville star, came into prominence in "Gold Diggers of Broadway." Now she has a star role of her own in "She Couldn't Say No." Chester Morris, Sally Eilers, Johnny Arthur, Tully Marshall and Louise Beavers are in the cast.

The atmosphere of night clubs and stage shows pervades the picture which tells the story of a girl entertainer who wins success despite many heartaches.

Myrtyl Ross Players in "Won by Waiting"

"WON by Waiting" sounds like one of the old-time thrillers. It will be done by the Myrtyl Ross Players next week, beginning Monday night. The Marion Canto club will sponsor the play for three nights, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, as a benefit for the choral organization.

Bushnell Dimond Tells of Two New Plays

NEW YORK, Feb. 22—Two singularly fine plays, a thousand miles apart in intention, technique, spirit and delivery, are "The Last Mile" and "Topaze." The difference between them is made the more apparent by the sole fact they have in common—each is staged with superb skill and acted with matchless and fervent artistry. The deep humanity of both plays it not really a common denominator, for without this richness of blood and torment of spirit there would be no reason for their existence.

"The Last Mile" was written by an actor named John Wexley currently appearing in Leo Bulgakov's production of Gorki's "At the Bottom." It sets forth in continuous action, punctuated by two curtains, what happens in a penitentiary one day and night. The plot-skeleton is almost identical with a recent horror at Auburn, but the character drawing, the dialogue and the manipulation of incident are entirely fresh and vibrant.

The first act develops the routine of prison, with an execution in the offing. This young convict is shown in successive stages of nerves, mockery, egotistical talkativeness and finally a paralytic bravery, as he goes to the chair. The other acts deal with the attempted jail break; the slaughter of two guards, and the collapse of the plan in a bath of blood.

All-Man Cast

The great merit of the play is its disinterested honesty, its lack of special pleading, its lashing, salty speech. It has the qualities of good literature, but it is impressive theater, too. Spencer Tracy as the killer and the youth who plays the condemned man stand out in an all-man cast that has been notably directed by Chester Erskin. "The Last Mile" cannot be recommended as jolly diversion, but no one except those in the last stages of personal hysteria will want to miss it.

"Topaze," adapted from the French of Marcel Pagnol by the English playwright, Benn W. Levy, is on another page. Only the shallow-minded—in spite of the play's jaunty manner—would deny that its roots sink quite as deep as those of "The Last Mile." It is the story of a humble French pedagogue whose tutelary life is made desperate by naughty pupils, a buttery bully of a head master, and the poor teacher's own inferiority feelings.

How he becomes a "new man" through the unwitting agency of a crowd of municipal grafters is revealed with astonishingly funny effect. But the laughter has bite and character, and the development of Topaze's character from a worm into an imperious, cool master of his fate is a delicious little epic of a soul's wanderings and aspirations.

The direction is of a superlative sort—silken in its savagery—the acting of Frank Morgan as the recalcitrant humble soul marks the height of his career, with Phoebe Foster, Clarence Derwent and a shoal of small boys lending priceless aid.

Miniature Reviews on Current Pictures

VARIETY'S miniature reviews on new pictures this week follow:

"Green Goddess." Strong Melodrama. Lacks the intensity and artistry of Arliss' "Disraeli."

"Puttin' on the Ritz" (UA). Entertaining backstage story with ultra production values an alibi for the familiar plot.

"Happy Days" (Fox). All that a sumptuous revue can have, good comedy, and neat romantic story background besides.

"Troopers Three" (Tiffany). An ordinary story but fine comedy and actual U. S. cavalry sequences that thrill and make this picture a likely business getter.

"Dangerous Paradise" (Par.) Thin story wrapped around nice scenery. Nancy Carroll-Dick Arlen names as aid.

"She Couldn't Say No." (WB) Title and Winnie Lightner make this good program. Racketeer story with different twist and tuneful songs.

* * *

"The Great Divide" (FN) Western based on play of same name. Very weak.

"Not So Dumb" (Metro). Sturdy comedy that can deliver a sock. A laugh picture of the better type, with Marion Davies' name over the title.

"Phantom of the Opera" (Universal). Revival of Lon Chaney 1925 film. Length cut to 89 minutes and dialog, sound effects and a few color sequences added. Still a thriller.

"Burning Up" (Par). Racing, crooked gamblers, boy and girl get-together, all done many time before. But enjoyable and breezy. With Richard Arlen and Mary Brian.

"Cameo Kirby" (Fox). Musical romance.

"So Long, Letty" (WB). A 15-year-old stage farce makes a fair picture. Charlotte Greenwood starred.

"Co-Optimists" (New Era). English-made revue is short on production values and photography.

"Why Cry at Parting" (Sudfilm), German made and all German dialog. Slapstick served on the familiar platter of the silent days. Holds a chuckle here and there. More action than most foreign flickers, and novelty of being first German talking comedy will help.

"Battle of Paris" (Par). Very poor picture. Slow, dull and of meager entertainment from any standpoint.

"The Crimson Circle" (British Int.) About a third dialog and weak for general exhibition. Underworld drama.

"The Mounted Stranger" (U.) Average program western starring Hoot Gibson. Good dialog and recording.

"Caught in Berlin's Underworld" (German made). Exceptionally good foreign thriller.

SEED CORN TESTS URGED IN COUNTY

Advice Given to Farmers Following Testing by School Department

"No farmer should consider planting corn this spring without running an ear test on it," L. B. Fidler, head of the vocational-agricultural department of the Waldo high school, said today following a test of 6,000 ears of seed corn in the last three weeks.

Ralph Gerfen, graduate of the vocational agriculture department, conducted the tests. A new rack and tester was built this year, each of which will hold 2,000 ears at one time. Corn in the Waldo community is germenating all the way from 10 to 90 per cent, depending upon the kind, those in charge of the tests said.

In general the seed selected quite early and artificially treated, tests from 95 to 100 per cent. Crib corn tests around 60 per cent, and stalk corn about the same percentage as crib corn.

One sample of year-old corn was tested. This corn germenated more than 90 per cent.

GREAT IN SORROW

THE greatness of George Washington, whose birth we again commemorate today, was not alone in the march of glory nor yet his Presidency and Nation Parenthood: but during that dark, sorrowful war winter at barren Valley Forge. There his devotion to soldier and fellow man more than love of victory and its reward, reveals the greatness of the man. There do we think of Washington: great in sorrow and suffering; enduring near to death himself, that his suffering men might be better cared for and comforted some.

There rests a lesson for each and every one of us—on this day set aside for Washington

Washington Memorial Chapel at Valley Forge—Commemorating the place where Washington and the Colonial Army endured the darkest days of the Revolution.

Bishop Center Tops Scorers In Buckeye

Siegenthaler's Lead Not To Last Long; Koterba in Second Place

BY DOUGLASS W. MILLER

FLOYD SIEGENTHALER, of Alliance, Ohio Wesleyan center who was high individual scorer in the Buckeye conference last season, is now in the lead again with three more Buckeye games to be played. Siegenthaler has 88 points and is in the lead for the first time this season.

His lead will be short-lived, however, for he has played his last conference game while "Chuck" Koterba, Columbus, Ohio forward, is but six points behind with a total of 82 and another game to play. "Bill" Popp, Cincinnati forward, likewise has a chance to finish above Siegenthaler for he has 69 points and two games to play. Raymond Scott, Dayton, Denison's sophomore center, has a fighting chance, too, with 76 points and a game to play. Koterba has the best chance of all, however, and should be at the top of the list at the close of the conference schedule.

Just 12 players have scored 35 points or more. They are listed below:

Siegenthaler, c, Ohio Wesleyan	88
Koterba, f, Ohio	82
Gandrup, f, Ohio Wesleyan	77
Scott, c, Denison	76
Popp, f, Cincinnati	69
Root, f, Ohio	56
Thomas, g, Ohio Wesleyan	45
Beewanger, g, Cincinnati	42
Flax, g, Cincinnati	36
Walker, g, Denison	36
Gervers, f, Cincinnati	35
North, c, Miami	35

EVEN Coach Tillotson of Miami is having trouble keeping track of the Barrett twins who play forward on the Big Red team. The boys look so much alike that they not only baffle opposing players but keep their own coach guessing. Tillotson has attempted to solve the problem by having one of the brothers wear a strip of tape around his wrist.

"But," says Tillotson, "I keep forgetting which one is wearing the tape."

GOOD basket shooting is the result not of "a keen eye for the basket" as is said so frequently but of muscle tone in the player's arms, wrists, and fingers, contends Coach Raymond O. Detrick of Ohio Wesleyan in an article on "How To Develop Basket Shooting" in the current issue of "The Coach." Other well-known coaches represented by articles in this issue of the publication are Veenker of the University of Michigan and Dyche of Montana State college.

Body motion should not be a part of shooting but the work should be done by the arms, wrists, and fingers, says Detrick. Shoot for the basket, no matter what the angle, rather than for the backboard except in dribble-in shots, is another of the bits of advice Detrick offers.

THE approaching track season is holding interest for fans at Ohio university for the first time in years. The excellent facilities for track afforded by Ohio's new stadium and the fact that the Buckeye conference meet will be held at Athens this spring for the first time in the history of the conference account for the renewed interest. The conference meet is scheduled for May 24.

Bobcat followers are expecting a record season in track. Eight lettermen are available and a score of sophomore candidates, said to be the best Ohio has had in years, have reported to Coach William Herbert.

Ohio's new track equipment includes two 220-yard straightaways; a feature duplicated by only one other track in the state, and jumping pits which have approaches from two sides so that athletes may avoid strong sunlight, winds, and heavy tracks.

LOCAL RALLY COMES TOO LATE IN BATTLE

Victors Score 10 Points on Fouls After Presidents Put Up Hard Battle; Score 22 to 19

BY KARL R. McELROY
Sports Editor, The Star.

DELAWARE is planning to make a strong bid for the central Ohio basketball tournament honors in the next two weeks and last night it looked the part when the Harding Presidents were defeated on the armory floor of the college town, 22 to 19.

For Harding it marked the close of a very unsuccessful basketball season in which the Red and Black won but two games. The Presidents hold victories over Bucyrus and Crestline.

The game, however, was far from being an utter rout in spite of the fact that it was the second victory the Delaware five had scored over the locals this season. Marion put up a grand fight and all but overtook Delaware in the last period.

Harding was unable to hold the scoring rampage of Burch. The Delaware forward scampered through the Red and Black defense for three field goals. Efforts of Harding to stop him resulted in the scoring of two foul goals to bring his total up to eight points.

Merkel of Harding was the outstanding scoring star of the contest. He counted four field goals and a foul for nine points. He failed to locate the basket until the last half when he rung up four field goals.

Harding played an excellent defensive game with the exception of the third quarter when Delaware scored a large proportion of its points. In the last quarter the winners were held to two points.

Failure of Harding to avoid fouling on the slippery armory floor resulted in the loss of the game. The Red and Black outscored Delaware on field goals, 7 to 6. The victors counted 10 free throws to Harding's five.

Marion went through the first period scoring but one free throw. Delaware marked up three free throws and a field goal. The race was close in the second frame with Harding rallying near the end of the half to run the score up to 10 to 7.

The third session went over big for Delaware. Three field goals and two fouls were scored by the college town while Harding was getting four points. The final period found Harding tightening up. The Red and Black defense located the basket and the locals counted eight points.

Victory Over Mansfield Gives Shelby Title

GALION IS UPSET BY BUCYRUS; SEASON IN N. C. O. LOOP CLOSES

Crall Runs Wild on Court as Team Watches Shreffler

CLOUDS are being painted with sunshine today in Shelby as the little Richland county town celebrates its first North Central Ohio league basketball pennant.

Shelby won a clear title to the honor last night by trouncing Mansfield after an inspired rally in the last half of the battle played in Mansfield. The final score was 17 to 13.

While Shelby was winning the pennant, Bucyrus stepped out to cop its second N. C. O. game of the season, defeating Galion, 29 to 23.

As a result of the two defeats, Galion and Mansfield are tied for second honors in the league. In third place is Bucyrus while Harding and Ashland are joint holders of the bottom berth. The two last place teams each won one game.

Although Mansfield held down Shreffler's scoring to two foul goals, it forgot to watch little Crall. The Shelby forward gave his team the title by counting 11 points.

At the half Mansfield held at 10-to-5 lead. But it did not last long for Shelby came back in the final half like true champions.

Galion's defeat by Bucyrus came as a surprise. The Bucyrus team was hitting its stride and it will be mighty hard to stop in the district tournament. The rally started too late for the North Central league race.

With Lerch, Baker and Talbott doing all the scoring, Galion did not have a chance. Mackey and Fredericks, the two Galion scoring aces, were held to small scores and the Orangemen were unable to seriously challenge Bucyrus. At the half Bucyrus held a 15-to-7 lead. Galion rallied in the third quarter but was unable to overtake the victory bound Bucyrus five.

The contests marked the close of the North Central league season.

Charley White Fails in Comeback Attempt

CHICAGO, Feb. 22 — Charley White, once a leading lightweight, went back to his business here today almost convinced that his fighting days are history. Henry Perlick, of Kalamazoo, Mich., knocked the veteran out in the second round of their bout last night.

Perlick's punches tumbled White four times in the two rounds. The last time he went down, White's seconds tossed in a towel. Before the last knockdown White was tottering on his feet. This was the veteran's first appearance in six years.

REYNOLDS IS VICTOR

CINCINNATI, Feb. 22—Using his dreaded leg split to gain two falls from Charley Grip, Huntington, here last night, Jack Reynolds, Cincinnati, won the decision and recognition from the National Boxing association as world's welterweight champion, in the first of a series of bouts under the N. B. A. to decide champions in all classes.

VERNON WINS JUNIOR CROWN

MONTANA GIVES DEMPSEY POINTERS ON WRESTLING

Bull Montana, the wrestler who is noted for his ugliness and as a hard man of the movies, is pictured above in a wrestling exhibition with Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight boxing champion. In their respective games, the two rank high in popularity. Montana is noted for his action as is Dempsey. Montana will meet Clete Kauffman at the Steam Shovel gym Tuesday night.

TILE COURSE

Expect to Start Work on Greens In Two Weeks

Mar-O-Del, Marion's new golf course, is humming with activity these springlike days as owners of the links begin to get it into shape for the opening of the season in the spring.

The course is being tiled and ditched and the draining work will be completed within the next two weeks. The work is being done by George Landon. An outlet across the Delaware rd. to the cemetery land is being laid.

As soon as the ditching work is completed, workers will start building the greens, it was announced today.

INDIANS GOING SOUTH

CLEVELAND, Feb. 22 — Minus the services of Wesley Ferrell and Willis Hudlin of the pitching staff, the Cleveland Indians entrain tonight for New Orleans and the sunny south to establish training quarters in preparation for a long baseball campaign ahead. Ferrell and Hudlin, to date, are holdouts.

LOCAL MARKET ENDS WEEK OF ACTIVITY

Egg Price Drop Is Outstanding Development: New Potatoes Arrive

Marion markets were resting today after one of the busiest weeks in recent months.

Eggs held foremost place in the week's activities, with a total drop of 12 cents on the dozen, one of the most sensational and unexpected changes in egg prices in years.

Beginning Monday at 42 to 47 cents a dozen after a struggle to gain in price over the week-end, eggs began a series of drops that landed them at 31 to 30 cents a dozen.

The middle of the week saw the arrival of first of new potatoes, at the introductory price of $1.25 a peck. Florida celery took the center of the celery market, entirely displacing the New York varieties last week. The Florida stalks sell between 8 and 12 cents each.

Cabbage, made scarce by recent southern frosts, was selling at eight and nine cents a pound last week, nearly a nickel above its former price.

Hothouse tomatoes hit the 40-cent mark last week, while hothouse strawberries maintained their former stand of 50 to 70 cents a quart.

Hospital Aid To Plan for New Equipment

Miss Grace Anderson, laboratorian at City hospital, was authorized to interview supply company representatives and make arrangements to purchase necessary equipment for the new pathological room which is soon to become a part of that institution, at a meeting yesterday with the Woman's board of the hospital.

The room will be equipped under supervision of Miss Anderson at the expense of the Woman's board. Miss Anderson will also have charge of the pathological room, which, as a clinic, assists physicians in making a diagnosis.

Egg Price Drop Totals Twelve Cents for Week

Eggs concluded a week of erratic prices by crashing the final cent this morning for a total drop of 12 cents a dozen since Monday.

The price of eggs is not expected to take further drops as today's quotations were as low as the retail market has been in years at this season of the year.

Warm weather, which increased the egg production of Marion county farms, and the slump in the purchase of eggs by hatcheries are the only reasons given for the present low price.

Here's Today's Review of Yesterday's Grain Market

CHICAGO, Feb. 22—An upward reaction in wheat prices was general in the principal world markets yesterday. Local values reflected the upturn as commission houses, locals and shorts bought because of the foreign strength and a substantial advance at Winnipeg due to improved export demand for Manitobas.

Coarse grains and rye worked to higher price levels in the general buying movement, inspired by the better tone in the wheat market. An improved eastern demand with a large volume of shipping sales from the local spot market was a feature of the corn trade.

At the close wheat prices were around a cent under the early highs, but registered net advances of 1⅛@1⅜c for the day. Corn was ⅝@¾c higher, oats, ⅛@¼c up, and rye, 1@1¼c higher. Winnipeg wheat futures closed 2⅜@2⅝c higher and Liverpool advanced 2⅛@2¼d.

Foreign Prices Rally

Local wheat prices opened near the day's highs and around two cents above the previous close on buying inspired by the strength in foreign markets. The advance brought out selling and the market showed a reactionary tendency with some rather sharp breaks, but relative strength in the Winnipeg market brought good support on the declines.

The rally at Liverpool was ascribed to a better demand to withdrawal of offers by the Canadian pool. This fact, plus a more active demand for North American wheat, with the bulk of 2,000,000 bushels estimated sales being Manitobas, were responsible for the firm tone in the Canadian market.

Indicative of the better foreign demand for wheat was the additional purchase of three cargoes of Argentine stuff. Some of the North American business was durums. There was also some talk of domestic flour sales to the United Kingdom. Late reports placed total sales for export as high as 4,000,000 bushels mainly Manitobas.

Local Trade Active

Trade in the local pit was active at times and pit observers commented on a wider interest with commission houses more active. Some of the selling on the advance was credited to early buyers and longs who were reluctant to maintain that position over the extended week-end due to the holiday today.

Crop comments from the domestic Winter wheat belt were generally favorable. The weather map showed clear and warm over the belt, with the forecast for cooler with some rain and snow. Apprehension concerning the unseasonably warm weather again received some attention yesterday.

Corn made a strong advance at the outset with wheat, reacted to the privilege level and then held practically stationary for the remainder of the session. There was an active trade in cash corn, receipts were lighter, the forecast being unfavorable weather for movement of corn and there was a greatly improved eastern demand. Shipping sales totaled 257,000 bu. up to the close. Country offerings were light and mainly above the market.

Cars of grain received and inspected—Wheat 29; corn, 159; oats, 10; rye, 1, and barley, 17.

A definite reason for extra value in our
Used Cars

When you buy a used car you should be sure the price is not put above the actual worth of the car to allow the dealer to recoup an excessive trade-in allowance.

Under the Ford policy there is no incentive for this sort of practice—for the price of the new Ford car is so low, and the value so high, that unreasonable trade-in concessions are hardly possible.

We allow the buyer of a Model A just what his old car is worth—And we offer that used car for sale on the same basis. Model T Fords are reconditioned throughout and guaranteed. Prices for other makes of cars are based on the service you will get from them. Right now we are offering unusual bargains in used transportation.

SCHOOL PUPILS HEAR SERIES OF LECTURES

Nearly All Fires Avoidable. Dayton Woman Says in Prevention Talks

School children learned that the shrieking of fire alarms and ringing of firebells means more than a thrill or an exciting fire fighting demonstration when Mrs. Adah Dodd Poince, of Dayton, gave a series of lectures on fire prevention in the city schools this week.

"Approximately 15,881 persons are burned to death every year and 45,000 are injured, perhaps maimed for life," Mrs. Poince declared. "Property loss runs into millions and thousands are without employment simply because someone did not think."

"Few realize that one gallon of gasoline has as great explosive power as 85 pounds of dynamite," Mrs. Poince continued. "Aside from the fires caused by lightning and earthquake, we believe all others could be avoided," Mrs. Poince said.

Bank Clearings Hit High Figure This Week

Bank clearings, augmented by the handling of several hundred thousand dollars coming from notes for the city board of education, were unusually high during the last week. The total for six days reached $780,016.44, considerably larger than the clearings of a week ago, which totaled $185,635.90.

Lowest clearings of the week were reported Wednesday, when but $62,180.07 was cleared.

DELIVERING INAUGURAL ADDRESS IN NEW YORK
G Washington
LAST FAREWELL TO HIS MOTHER
CROSSING THE DELAWARE
LAST MOMENTS OF GEORGE WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—The unselfishness, modesty, kindness and reverence that comprised the character of George Washington, was described by Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution in a radio address yesterday for the National Radio Homemakers' club.

Washington's most momentous question, and admonishing us now, is, "Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalship, interest, humor or caprice," said Mrs. Hobart.

As Washington left Mt. Vernon to accept the presidency, Mrs. Hobart recalled, his friends and neighbors at Alexandria announced:

"The first and best of citizens must leave us; our aged must lose their ornament; our youth their model; our agriculture its improver; our commerce its friend; our infant academy its protector; our poor their benefactor, and the interior navigation of the Potomac . . . its institutor and promotor . . .

"To that Being, who maketh and unmaketh at His will, we commend you, and, after the accomplishment of the arduous business to which you are called may He restore to us again the best of men, and the most beloved fellow citizen."

Washington insisted, Mrs. Hobart said, "that aided by the industry and moral conduct of citizens who compose the great family of our union, we may hope for the substantial enjoyments of individual happiness and national honor."

Be Careful of Checks

PASSERS of worthless checks, who have been giving Marion officials and merchants no end of trouble in the last few years, may receive a setback, if merchants follow the advice of the Ohio Bankers' association, which recently urged that all business men refuse to cash checks for strangers.

The total amount of money lost through cashing bad checks for the nation is estimated at $3,000,000 each year, according to the association. Most of this is lost by merchants and their surety companies. Little is lost by banks because they insist upon check writers being identified properly.

Merchants are also urged to prosecute check artists once they are apprehended. Local court records are an indication that merchants often refuse to prosecute the passer of a bad check, once he is arrested and forced to redeem the check.

It is a simple matter for a person with a check to be cashed to funish proper identification, according to the Bankers' association. Any person who has a checking account and is honest will not resent this precaution because it is such apparent good business, the association believes.

It is better, the association declares, for a merchant to lose an occasional sale than to make that sale through cashing what turns out to be a fraudulent check from a stranger.

Made to Order Name

NAMES are often unusually appropriate to the persons who own them, but the prize winner of the whole list visited Marion this week.

His name is M. E. Ketchum, and his title if sheriff of Wayne County, W. Va.

In his campaign for election, what would be a better slogan than simply his name. That's what sheriffs are elected to do—to"Ketchum."

Winter Safeguard

DID you know that the earth is warm? It is to a surprising degree.

In fact, the water company, in setting an outside meter, often digs a hole two or three feet in the ground below the meter, sinks a large tile vertically to prevent it caving in, and depends on the heat from this hole to keep the meter from freezing. And it works, officials of the company say.

Of course, the earth never freezes a few feet under the surface, no matter how cold the weather may be.

According to that theory, a garage with a plain earth floor would be warmer in winter than one with a floor of concrete or other material.

One might dig a large hole just under the place where the radiator stands when the car is in the garage, and thus prevent the water in it from freezing on cold nights.

Fleeting Jobholders

PLANS of city officials have been inclined to go astray within the last few days, especially in regard to hiring employes.

A technician for the city's pathological room, which is now in the making at City hospital, was signed on the dotted line, and promised to be in Marion and "on the job" on a certain date. Her next letter came from New York, where she had obtained a better position.

Thursday found a Prospect boy in charge of Marion airport, and officials were expressing their gratification that the port was being manned and that the hangar was being kept open to passing planes.

In the afternoon of the same day on which he began work the young man changed his mind and resigned his new position.

Outside Contributions

THE sister states of Virginia and West Virginia have contributed substantially to the grief of local police officers within the last month.

The third offense in which Virginia or West Virginia men figured occurred Thursday, when two youths, with what police believed to be a stolen car, were stopped here after they had run the car several miles on a flat tire.

About a month ago, two West Virginia boys attended prayer meeting in their home town, left the state for Ohio roads, and finally came to grief against a culvert at Newmans bridge south of here. One of the boys landed in the hospital, while the other escaped to steal a car here and dash to Portsmouth, wrecking it at that city.

Last week M. E. Ketchum, sheriff of Mason county, W. Va., came to Marion and asked local police to arrest a man here on a non-support charge. Local police did the job, and the man is now in Virginia "telling it to the judge."

PLANS APPROVED

Marion and Union County Boards Take Action on Ditch Project

Estimated assessments and specifications for the construction of the Beaver Run ditch in Marion and Union counties were approved yesterday at a meeting of the boards of commissioners of the two counties.

The joint boards set March 20 as the date for receiving bids for the construction of the improvement. Assessments will be payable in four semi-annual installments beginning with the tax collection next December.

At a hearing on a petition for an extension to the Beaver Run ditch the joint boards dismissed the petition. Objections of interested property owners and the fear that the extension would delay the construction of the main ditch were given as reasons for dismissal.

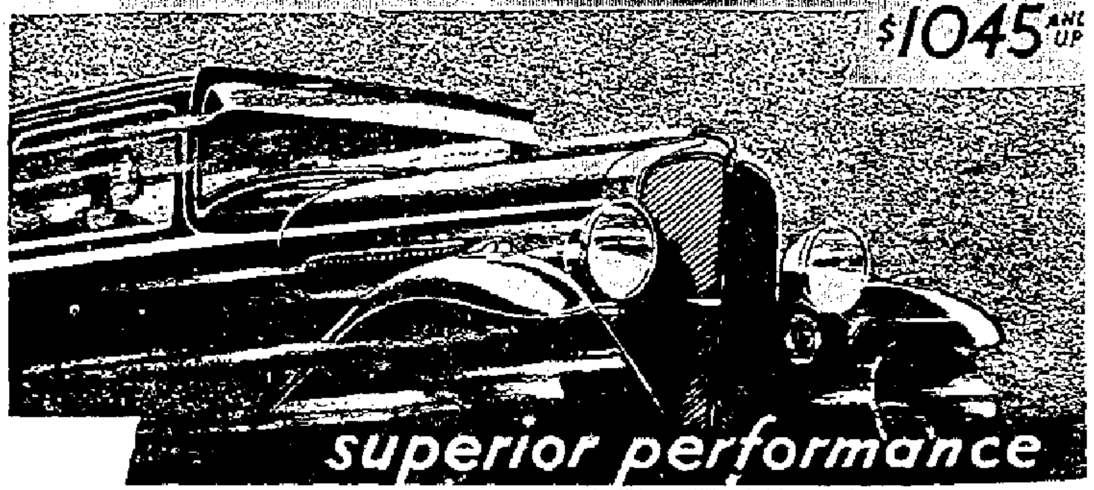
Unusual features of design assure EXCEPTIONAL ECONOMY

$1045 AND UP



Though it is known mainly for its superior performance and smoothness, the New Oakland Eight is also exceptionally economical. Unusually accessible parts make its maintenance cost low. Its sound basic design assures long service. And its gasoline mileage equals that of many sixes of similar size and weight. ¶ Its power plant provides ample space for large, long-lived bearings. Its short, rigid crankshaft eliminates torsional vibration and bending, two enemies of long life. Generous water passages around cylinders and valves protect against overheating, and a water recirculation system insures uniform cooling. ¶ Complete down-draft carburetion and manifolding promote more economical use of fuel. A new-type cylinder head insures uniform combustion. Positive lubrication under 25 to 30 lbs. pressure supplies a constant flow of oil to moving parts. And crankcase ventilation prevents dilution of engine oil. ¶ Furthermore, Oakland's wood-and-steel Fisher bodies resist wear, being well constructed of materials chosen for hard service and long life. These features keep operating and maintenance costs low, and protect the car's ultimate resale value. ¶ In view of its many advantages, the New Oakland is very moderately priced. Why not come in and drive this newest General Motors eight whose superior performance is made all the more attractive by its exceptional economy?

The New Oakland Eight, $1045 and up, f. o. b. Pontiac, Michigan, plus delivery charges. Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers included in list prices. Bumpers, rear fender guards and spring covers extra. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

Consider the delivered price as well as the list (f. o. b.) price when comparing automobile values . . . Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices include only authorized charges for freight and delivery and the charge for any additional accessories or financing desired.

Start of Naval Conference So Big and Impressive That Rest of Session Seemed Flat, Rogers Says

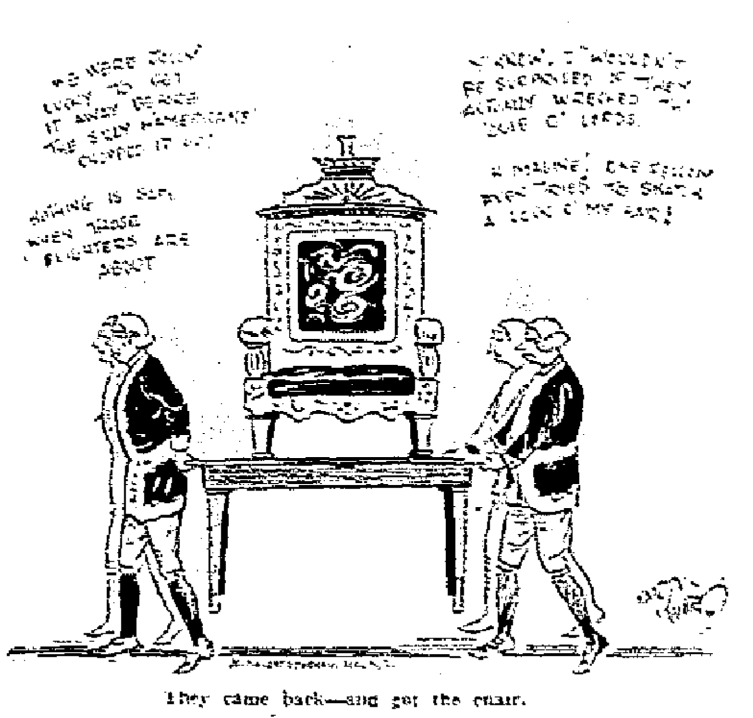
[illegible]ings of British Sea Victories Grace Meeting Room

King Took No Chances and Had His Throne Taken Away

BY WILL ROGERS

W[illegible] all I know is just what I [illegible] in the papers, or what I [illegible] I prowl around. Of all the [illegible] the English trip I have [illegible] more about was the big [illegible] the Conference where the [illegible] present. Well that was [illegible] there was and has been to [illegible]ference so far. The opening [illegible] big and impressive that they [illegible] been able to follow it up. Its [illegible] act on the stage coming out [illegible] their very best trick first. [illegible] have nothing to do after[illegible]. But in all seriousness I feel [illegible] sooner or later (mostly later) [illegible] be able to accomplish some[illegible] over there. Nothing so big [illegible] as some had hoped, but [illegible] do something.

[illegible] this opening was in one of [illegible] rooms called the Lord's Room in [illegible] of Parliament. Its not the [illegible] they meet, its I suppose [illegible] room. In fact I dont know [illegible] used for ordinarily. Its not [illegible] just a big old long bare [illegible] some great paintings all [illegible] the walls, and a funny thing [illegible] hind the speakers was a scene [illegible] on the seas where Lord [illegible] their greatest Naval Hero, [illegible] a hand to hand battle with [illegible] on the deck of the ship. [illegible] all the speakers was an[illegible] Naval battle scene where the [illegible] Navy had sunk somebody. [illegible] You would have thought their [illegible] humor would have made [illegible] these things and get them [illegible] there while this great effort [illegible] ships was on. It would [illegible] like the Anti Saloon League [illegible] their convention in a speak[illegible].



They came back—and got the chair.

Gets Lowdown on Fog

I had heard of London fogs, and [illegible] my trips over there hereto[illegible] had been in the summer and I [illegible] never seen a really great fog in [illegible]. But Broth! I want to tell [illegible] that on the very morning of this great opening ceremony, it was pitch dark. Cabs were poking along, people feeling their way about. The King coming from Buckingham Palace had policemen walking in front of his Auto with lights. Crowds of people had gathered along the route he was to take to see him but they couldent even see the street he was to come along, much less his car.

And thats how our poor Charley Dawes got late. Here we had sent him over to England five months ahead so that he would be on time, and the poor fellow missed the King's speech and half the others. Guess he dident have any Policemen to guide him. Everybody of an official nature had on the usual morning dress, cutaway coat, stripe trousers and black shoes, and high top hat. All but the American Newspaper men, lots of us still had on our Pajamas. News Hounds from other Countries they had all these costumes, some of them looked better than their Deligations. But these old Political News sleuths from Washington, they had been on too many trips and Conventions, this was just another gathering with them. Course the King was kinder new to em. But outside of that and the fog there was no novelty.

I sure was lucky. My seat in the Press section was the row just in front of where the wives of the Deligates sit, and right behind me sat Mrs. Morrow, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Dawes, Mrs. Gibson, Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Stimpson. We could talk and visit without being rude, for we would do it during the time that the Interpreter was translating from English to French, or Visa Versa. You see every speech had to be translated. Not into Japenese. I don't know how they were supposed to know what it was all about. They dident come there to hear speeches anyway; they come to get more ships, and you watch em get em, too.

Showed Confidence

A thing that struck me rather odd was that there was no prayer, or benediction, or blessing, or a single thing to start it off. You would have thought that they would have made some plea for divine guidance. But they seemed to have enough confidence in themselves that they dident need any help from the Lord. However I think by now they wish they had asked Him to give them some small assistance.

Now the King comes in. Prime Minister MacDonald and one of his cabinet walk on either side. He looks fine. This is really his first public appearance since his severe illness, and the English people felt a little nervous that he might show the effects of it. But he dident at all. He walked in with a steady gait. He has a very infectious smile, and he bowed to the left and right very generously as he walked down the aisleway. He was escorted to the Throne Chair. All this time everyone was standing. Then MacDonald announced who it was, and he started in. He read his speech, as all of them did, but a man from Australia, he had learned his. The King has practically no English accent at all. He speaks perfect English. He was by far the easiest understood of any speaker there. We all stood all during his speech. Happily it wasent long. The minute he had finished he was escorted out, and all remained standing. He dident even wait until it had been interpreted into French.

Then is when he sent four men carrying a long table back, and they carried the Throne Chair out. Of course that struck us Americans as funny. You would have thought they had enough Throne Chairs that they wouldent have to carry one around with him. Or knowing that Curio hunting mania of us folks over here, he knew that parts of that chair would be in Arkansaw, and the throne part in Pennsylvania. Of course the Republican Senator would have taken care of that. But the King sent back for it after he had gone out, and we all stood still while they carried it out, they put it on this table, and carried it like it was a stretcher. The King then went back to his Country Estate Sandingham, or something like that. He had only come up for this.

Prince in Africa

The Prince of Wales was of course down in Africa. Then the other Speakers, then the long interpreters, and that's when I would get all the scandal from the Women. Mrs. Morrow was telling me all about Anne and Charles, that's what she calls em, Anne and Charles. She told me about the wedding, and how they fooled the newspaper men who were standing out at the front gate all the time. The family dident take so heartily to her flying. But after she got so enthusiastic about it, and they figured that on account of the teacher she had why it was OK. Mrs. Morrow of course then dident know about this Glider stuff they have been pulling. That sitting up there on a little dab of canvas and some boards with no engine, and no power, that wouldent look so encouraging to me. I want all the engines I can get, and I want em all going at full speed before I crawl into anything. I must write you next week about what Ambassador Dawes had to say about these American Girls who their folks practically go as far as committing murder to get them presented to the Queen every year. You wouldent believe that such scheming and conniving existed. Remember next week, "Meet the Queen."

Delaware District Methodists To Meet Here Monday

Pentecostal Program on for Mid-Year Conference

Meeting at Wesley M. E. Church Scheduled for Opening at 9 A. M. with Superintendent Armacost in Charge: Various Pastors Assigned to Talks

The mid-year Delaware district conference will be held Monday at Wesley M. E. church, Olney av., with the Rev. W. Martell George, pastor, as host. The Rev. H. E. Armacost, of Delaware, district superintendent, will be present.

The conference is being held early this year because the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Armacost have planned an early spring trip abroad. It will be a Pentecostal program.

Opening at 9 o'clock Monday morning, the conference will continue through the day until its adjournment at about 4:30 o'clock, following the administration of the Sacrament.

Breakfast Eliminated

Because the conference is a one-day session and comes on Monday, the usual custom of the annual breakfast with pastors and their wives as guests of the superintendent and his wife will be abandoned for this year. All pastors of the district and their wives will be the noon luncheon guests of the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Armacost.

The program for the day will be as follows: 9 o'clock, Pentecostal hour, with the Rev. Mr. Armacost as leader; 9:15 o'clock, "The Challenge of Pentecost to the Church of Today," Dr. C. E. Turley, pastor of Epworth M. E. church; 10:45 o'clock, Pentecostal interpretation of E. Stanley Jones' book, "The Christ of Every Road," the Rev. Robert Kennedy, of Ada; 10:45 o'clock, "World Service in Terms of Pentecost," the Rev. Harold W. Ruopp, of Delaware.

10-Minute Talks

A symposium of 10-minute talks will be given, including "Pentecostal Ministers," the Rev. L. B. Smith, of Harpster, "Pentecostal Sermons," the Rev. J. A. Jenkinson, of Quincy, "Pentecostal Laymen," the Rev. A. L. Vandegriff, of Dunkirk, "Pentecostal Churches," the Rev. R. J. Turrell, of Carey, and "Pentecostal Giving," the Rev. C. W. Sultzbuch, of Prospect.

From 12:15 to 1:30 o'clock, the Pentecostal fellowship hour and luncheon will be enjoyed. Women of the church will serve the luncheon.

The afternoon program will open with a Pentecostal roll call at 1:30 o'clock with two-minute responses by each pastor, one minute for difficult problems, and one minute for the best things achieved.

At 3 o'clock the Rev. L. R. Kennard, of Roundhead, will talk on "Pentecostal Church Unity As Interpreted by the Pastor's Convention." Dr. J. C. Roberts, of Columbus, will talk on "Pentecostal Adventure in Brotherhood: The Ministerial Relief Fund," at 3:30 o'clock. This will be followed by the administration of the Sacrament and adjournment.

Those in charge are hopeful that a full attendance of all quarterly conference members will be present for this mid-year conference. Visiting pastors have been asked to bring the largest delegations possible.

MINISTER PREPARES FOR OVERSEAS TOUR

Rev. K. W. Patow Will Leave Monday for Visit to Foreign Parts

The Rev. Karl W. Patow, above, pastor of the Prospect Street M. E. church, will leave Marion Monday afternoon to sail from New York City Thursday on the S S Laurentic for a Mediterranean cruise. He will return to Marion about May 1.

In the party with the local minister will be two ministers from Detroit. These men will travel together, under the guidance of a Cook tour, except while in Palestine. At that time they will travel independently by private automobile to points of especial interest to them.

Points of interest that will be visited by the Rev. Mr. Patow are: Funchal, Madeira; Gibraltar; Algeria, Algiers; Monaco, French Riviera; Naples, Italy; Athens, Greece; Constantinople, Turkey; Haifa, Palestine; Beirut; Damascus; Tiberias; sightseeing in Jerusalem and Judea; Alexandria, Egypt; Syracuse, Sicily; Rome; Southampton and Liverpool, England.

Through the generosity of his congregation the Rev. Mr. Patow will see Rome while in Italy. This trip is an additional feature of the tour, and money was provided by his congregation.

While he is absent from his work here, the Rev. Mr. Patow has outlined his services for church and for the midweek services, through April 30. The church services will include visiting ministers and prominent Marion men.

BY THE REV. J. A. CARRIKER,
Pastor, Forest Lawn Presbyterian Church

1. A firm conviction that the family is a God-given institution. Its origin goes back to the creation of man. "It is not good for man to be alone. Let us make a helpmeet for man."

2. A common sense view of sex feeling. It is a God-given instinct. Properly guarded it is right and natural.

3. Mutual love. It is described in 1st Cor. 13th chapter.

4. Maintain your mutual reserves. Your are one, but the joy of being one depends upon how well you remain two.

5. Express your affection. Get the habit.

6. Don't express your disapproval or antagonism. Get the habit of sitting down quietly and talking over disagreements.

7. Have an understanding about money.

8. Have faith in one another. "He that believeth not shall be damned."

9. Avoid the "intimate friend."

10. Manage to play together as often as possible.

11. Be equals. Permanent happiness is based upon it.

12. Trust in God together. No two people can take everything to God in prayer together and not be happy.

13. Make a home for the child; for the adult; for happy memories; for religious training. If you wish the members of your family to be Christian, first be Christian yourself.

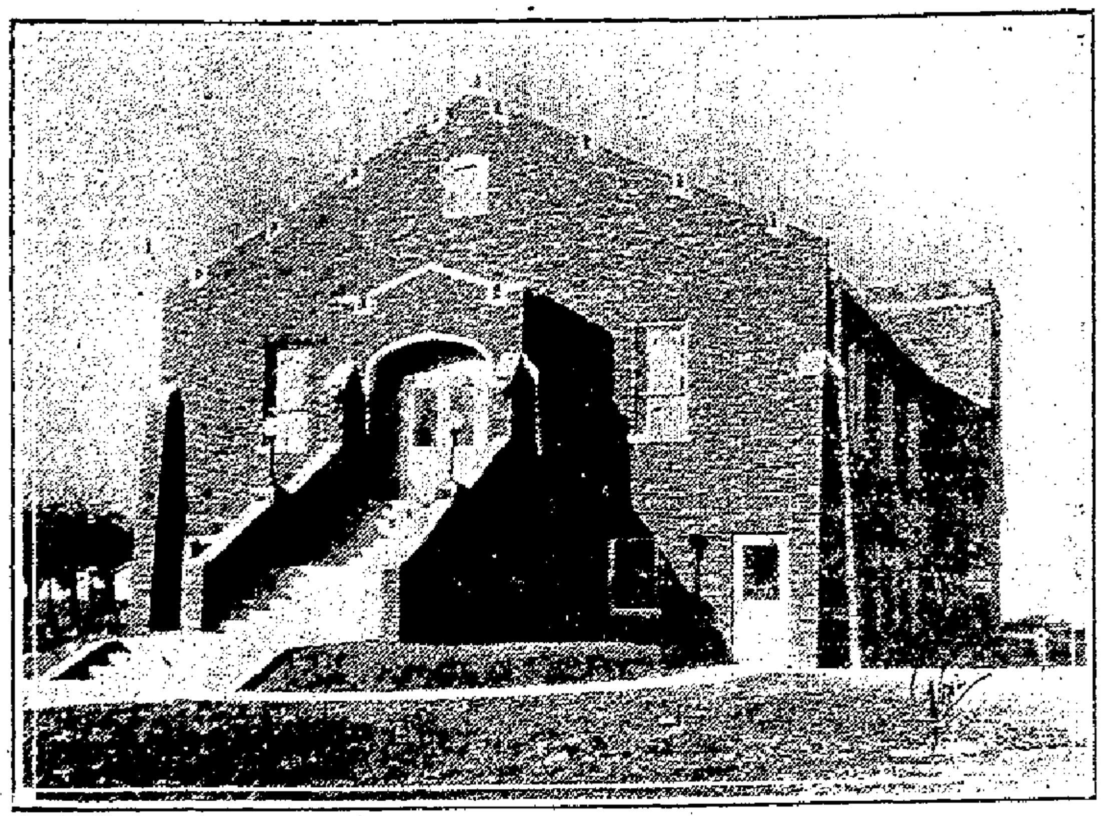
Forest Lawn Church Advances from Small Mission to 11th in Presbytery



FOREST LAWN PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

ELEVENTH in point of size in the Marion Presbytery is the record of Forest Lawn Presbyterian church, with a membership of approximately 280.

Like most of the churches of Marion, Forest Lawn had its beginning in a mission Sunday school. That was in 1902. Five years before East Center st. was paved, Capt. J. C. Walter gathered a group of the children in East Marion and started a Sabbath school in a house on the northwest corner of East Center and Barnhart sts. At that time the side streets had no sidewalks.

Site Bought in 1905

The site of the original mission and the present church was purchased in 1905 by the trustees of the First Presbyterian church for $1,600, and in 1912 a frame chapel was erected.

The Rev. J. L. Pake, first pastor, served the church only on a part-time basis. Under the leadership of the Rev. J. B. Bryce, who succeeded the Rev. Mr. Pake in 1918, the Presbytery of Marion organized a church in October, 1920, with 50 charter members. Of the first elders, E. C. Caldwell, Frank V. Cheney, and C. C. Appleman, the first two are dead. Mr. Appleman is still an elder in the church.

The present church edifice of colonial red brick trimmed in sandstone was erected in 1922 while the Rev. A. W. Swan was pastor. In his time as pastor, the church became the twelfth largest in the Presbytery of 25 churches.

Now Ranks Eleventh

The Rev. John A. Carriker, present pastor, came to the church in 1927, and Forest Lawn Community, a growing part of the city of Marion, has boosted the church to eleventh in size in the Presbytery.

Forest Lawn church has an active group of young people's societies, missionary and ladies air societies and classes. Recently the Kitchen Cabinet orchestra of the church was reorganized for its fifth year in the city. This is one of the most popular of church entertainment groups in the city.

FRATERNITY CHAPTER FORMED AT CHURCH

Walter Lockwood President of New St. Paul's Episcopal Society

A chapter of Kappa Beta Kappa, a national order for young people in the Episcopal church, has been formed at St. Paul's church here, with Walter Lockwood as president, Miss Elizabeth Jones, vice president, Miss Carmen Jones, secretary, Miss Jean Lois Witt, treasurer, and Miss Mary Lee Concklin and A. V. Witt as advisors.

The three Greek initial letters signify consecration, service and fellowship. The object of the society is to develop loyalty among young people and to stimulate endeavor along the four lines of worship, service, knowledge and fellowship.

The society is open to all young people over 14 years old. Meetings of business and study are held every other Sunday at 4 o'clock at the parish house. Fellowship meetings are held once a month and are spent in dancing and other forms of entertainment.

Anyone a-Hunting Values Will Shop in Marion Wednesday

Just ask any one of your neighbors, who accepted last week's invitation to come to Marion on "Marion Day." Not for weeks have Marion streets been so crowded with happy shoppers.

And best of all, everyone was satisfied for the values were worth coming miles to purchase.

Each week, on Wednesday, the leading Marion Merchants invite all our neighbors to shop in Marion. Every store offers remarkable bargains in seasonable merchandise.

Next Wednesday Is Your Opportunity to Shop and Save

Seasonal Signs

The eighth robin is seen, and young Mr. Blake and younger Miss Schuyler, a-horse, find birds, bees and bridle-paths sufficiently interesting not to hear stout Mr. Dudley's frantic "Fore!" as he slices his drive out of bounds from the fourth tee.

Down by the river the crocuses give way to lilies-of-the-valley, and little Herbie Anderson begs to go barefooted...."please Ma, kin I?"

Motor roads were never so inviting, and across the street, lanky Joe Peters mysteriously begins spending four hours a day beneath the differential housing.

Daily Proverb—"That which is probable is the greatest enemy to truth."

It's hard to understand why the naming of Pullman cars should prove so much of a job so long as maps of Wales are obtainable.

Nine youths arrested up in Wisconsin are charged with conspiracy to forge signatures to registered government bonds of the face value of $10,000 stolen from a safe in a garage in Waterloo, Iowa. Instead of reporting his loss to the police, the owner reported direct to the treasury department, and Uncle Sam did the rest.

A Chicago husband and wife have been awarded a judgment of $1,250 for being expelled from a theater up there for spooning when the lights were turned off. Hurrah! Another blow struck for liberty and marital love and affection!

It is said that the discovery of Dr. Ernest Reed, professor of botany in Syracuse university, that the tops of beets are rich in sugar, will means $10,000,000 yearly to the beet growers of the country. Research generally pays dividends, proving profitable to the public generally, even though not in dollars and cents profitable to the one conducting it.

Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, urges congress to protest against the Russian drive against the church. Just where would the United States get itself by protesting to a despotic government with which it refuses to hold diplomatic relations?

An American woman is reported to have been greatly surprised when a riot immediately followed her tossing of 36,000 francs, won by her over a casino baccarat table, from her hotel window in Nice to the avenue below over which a carnival procession was passing. Of course, it's hardly necessary to explain that it was her first visit to France.

Washington is a bit disturbed over the boast of a young woman communist, apprehended by the police there, that 300 pupils in the schools of the District of Columbia are working for communism. The federal capital has good reason to be exercised, but no more than any other city of considerable size and the college towns of the country. The same thing is going on all over the land.

The internal revenue bureau reports that tax collections on revolvers and pistols between July 1, 1929 and January 30, 1930, were almost three times what they were for the corresponding period of the preceding fiscal year, having gone up to $272,555, an increase of $178,544. What's the answer: more gunmen outside as well as inside the law, or a popular movement toward self-defense?

The Real Chicago in Action.

Two wire stories came out of Chicago yesterday bearing on the activities of that element of her citizenship, which has made her the great city she is, to meet the financial and crime problems which confront her. As a rule, the activities of this element figure but slightly in the news presented by the press of the land. It is her criminal element which usually gets the first-page positions.

One of these stories related to the trust fund being raised to pull the city government out of the financial mire into which the stupidity, if nothing worse, of an incompetent city government has driven her. It was the original plan to raise a fund of $40,000,000 to meet the situation. This was raised to $50,000,000, and now the goal is set at $75,000,000, which will enable the city, her school board, her sanitary district and Cook county to operate effectively for the first half of the year.

The other story related to the determination of Chicago's business interests no longer to pay tribute to the racketeering element which has grown financially fat on the spoils of its raids against them. They have raised a fund of $1,000,000 to combat the racketeers and drive them from the city, and are ready to pay any amount necessary to accomplish the end sought. It is a case of millions for defense against the assaults of the crooks and not a cent for tribute. In fact, the fund for the accomplishment of the purpose is practically unlimited.

Thus is Chicago's substantial, decent element meeting the city's serious financial mergency and warring on the gunmen, gangsters and crooks who have so long made the name of Chicago a by-word.

And here we have in the city of Chicago another illustration of that American characteristic which is responsible for much of the criminal excesses from which the country suffers. Its good, law-abiding, responsible citizenship will long remain passive under outrages against it, far too long. But once aroused, there are no bounds to the activities and resources it will employ to meet the situation.

Business Situation Improved.

The growing belief that the country is recovering from the shock it sustained as a result of the crashing of stocks following the orgy of speculation in Wall Street last year and that business is now on the upgrade with danger of a long period of depression fairly over was strengthened this week by statements given out in Washington by Secretary of Commerce Lamont and Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the National Business Survey conference, in which they offered facts and figures in explanation of the speedy recovery.

Secretary Lamont announced compilations in his department showing that contracts awarded in twenty-seven states during January for the construction of public works and public utilities amounted to $112,065,000, which was 115 per cent. over the record for December and exceeded the total for any January in the past six years.

The secretary also stated that advices received from the governors of the various states of the union which had come to his department confirmed its previous estimate that expenditures for the building and maintenance of public works and public utilities would total, if not exceed, $7,000,000,000.

Mr. Barnes stated that he spoke of business conditions of the country with greater confidence because of a comprehensive survey just concluded by the conference, and he gave credit for the improvement manifested to "the collective common sense, the courage and enterprise of all kinds of Americans, in business and out." The improvement was to be attributed in part, he said, to the large business units, such as the railroads, the steel industry, public utilities and others, in speeding up construction plans to meet the president's urge for a return to normal conditions with a consequent solution of the unemployment problem.

Mr. Barnes holds that one of the particularly encouraging factors in the situation is the fact that at least 44,000,000 persons are at present employed, which means that there are 10,000,000 more at work than were employed during the industrial and commercial slump, of 1921. "This in itself," he points out, "helps to explain the checking of this business recession in so short a time, because these 10,000,000 additional workers, earning higher incomes than was possible in earlier years, themselves furnish a buying power which keeps fellow-workers employed and factories running to serve their needs. Any wide unemployment immediately reacts on business and the modern business man, knowing this, is as anxious as the worker himself to keep unemployment at a minimum."

Several days ago, readers will recall, we ran in these columns an outline of the radio address of Secretary of Labor Davis on business and employment conditions, and the facts and figures offered by him to maintain his declaration that the country was recovering from the depression which began following the crumbling of the market values of stocks. It will be noted that the conclusion reached by Secretary Davis is in every way supported by the facts and figures offered by the chairman of the National Business Survey conference and Secretary Lamont.

A Cleveland engineer predicts that we of America will soon be building windowless houses. If the reign of crime continues we will have to do something like that and surround them with wide and deep moats as well to protect our lives and our valuables.

Democratic State Chairman Brunner is all worked up over the fact that he found a rocking chair in the equipment, purchased by the state, of the office of a secretary of a commission occupying quarters in the state house. Is he absolutely heartless? Can it be that he begrudges a poor, overworked servant of the state taking an occasional bit of relaxation?

Archaeologists excavating in Egypt near the Sphinx have found in a tomb a large gold vase containing flowers fashioned from gold and a number of gold necklaces, one of which contains 4,000 rubies. Archeology is liable to pick up in the esteem of a lot of people who have not in the past given it more than passing thought.

Leo Schoenhair, the Akron aviator, was not content with the world record set by him down in Jacksonville, Florida, last Tuesday, but went out Thursday and set four more—records for 1,000 kilogram loads over 100, 600 and 1,000 kilometers and for 500 kilograms over 1,000 kilometers. It strikes us that Leo lacks reverence for professional ethics. He should leave something for his fellow-airmen to break.

Local egg prices dropped eleven cents a dozen between Monday and Friday, as the result, it is explained, of a general unloading by poultrymen who were holding eggs for better prices. They must have started holding them too early, overlooking the fact that Easter comes very late this year.

Beverly, Massachusetts, proposes to penalize the makers of man-made static through the improper operation of street cars, block signals, automatic ice boxes, electric vibrators and x-ray machines by fining such offenders, exempting only electric motors and x-ray machines properly equipped to prevent interference with radio reception. The Beverly authorities refuse to permit interference in the enjoyment of the lady-crooners and Rudy Vallee.

Market men are claiming that the government lost $1,000,000 on its holding of 10,000,000 bushels of wheat by the week's drop in the grain market. That might have been true had the government been buying on margins, but it still has its wheat.

Live Wisely for Clear Skin.

BY ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

It is amazing how few faces show anything like perfect skin. You may look around you and see a surprising number that are not really clean. It is not until you really experiment a bit to find out for yourself how much dirt and grime can accumulate on the complexion that you are convinced that one face can hold so much.

Cleanliness of the skin is absolutely essential to good health. The face, and every part of the body, should be washed with a soothing, mild soap and plenty of warm water every day. The face should be washed much more than once a day, particularly if you live in the city. The dirt and bacteria of the air are constantly falling on the face and lodging there. The natural oil of the skin catches and holds them.

The skin is a protection to the machinery of the body, the machinery that does the hourly and daily work of life. A clean skin is essential to the physical welfare. It must be kept in good condition if we are to have good health.

The skin is the point of discharge of many of the wastes and poisons of the body. They are gotten rid of through the moisture and perspiration. If the pores of the skin are clogged up with dirt, then ventilation and the life processes are retarded.

There is no doubt that many persons use the wrong kind of soap. A too strong soap is bad for the skin. It contains an excess of alkali, and dissolves the necessary oils of the skins. Some persons do not use any soap. Yet it is impossible to clean the skin properly without the use of soap.

After thoroughly washing the face, it is well to massage into the skin a good cold cream. Then wipe it off, in order to remove any deep-seated dirt from the pores of the skin. It should not be washed off. Enough of the oil is then left on the skin to nourish the tissues, and to keep the skin flexible.

The skin has a certain amount of oil to make it impervious to infection from bacteria from without. But you are not safe from infection of one kind or another unless you do keep the skin perfectly clean.

For the face, especially, as I said before, a mild soap is the best to use. In winter, if very warm water is used on the face, it is wise to apply cold water before wiping the face, if one is going out-of-doors immediately. In this way, "the pores of the skin are closed" and chapping is not apt to follow.

Another reason for a bad skin, is improper eating. Eating much pastry and greasy foods will surely have its effect in a bad skin. The complexion shows immediately bad habits of eating and drinking. The effects of indigestion and constipation show very quickly in the complexion.

Drink plenty of water if you want to have a good skin. One should have not less than six glasses of water, or its equivalent, daily.

And last, but a very important thing, is that vigorous exercise every day, out-of-doors, will do much for your body and for your skin. A walk in the brisk winter air will put new life into the tissues, and the facial skin will show immediately by its warm glow that fresh air is the stimulating factor for a good complexion, as it is for general good health.

ONCE IN TEHUANTEPEC.

No doubt Mexico has long since learned to scan with a philosophical good grace the annual summaries of the increase in traffic through the Panama canal—which reached, this last year, "over 31,000,000 tons." Futile to dwell upon what might have been and what for a little while was. And yet . . . .

In 1926 Panama traffic began to show a colossal yearly growth, most profitable to our country. In 1907—no longer ago than that!—President Porfirio Diaz formally opened the Tehuantepec National railway, at a brilliant ceremony, before the representatives of a score of nations, and Mexico seemed destined to the very prosperity we now enjoy. At his signal a monster crane raised from the hold of the Arizona, anchored at Salina Cruz, the first cargo of sugar to be sped across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec. With great symbolic gold and silver keys he opened the port of Coatzacoalcos, henceforward to be called Puerto Mexico, and that of Salina Cruz, about—so every one then believed—to become one of the best-equipped and busiest of Pacific harbors. And, indeed, there followed the expected new prosperity, and it grew and flourished, until at one time more than thirty trains a day were punctually making the twelve-hour journey across the continent, over the transisthmian line.

Today three trains a week set out from Puerto Mexico to Salina Cruz along that jungle railway—that splendid dream which engineering skill and Mexican enterprise made to come true, which excelled all dreams, and which like a dream faded with sad swiftness the moment the United States opened the Panama canal. Salina Cruz now is a closed port, a dead city. Not so much as a launch uses its decaying wharves. No ship rides in the quiet waters of the artificial inner harbor, where the old town lies submerged, four fathoms down. The electric cranes, the massive breakwaters, all the magnificent port works which were expected to take a giant's part in the commerce of the world are roosts for seabirds. A Chinaman steadfastly keeps his clean hotel there, but the sand blows through the streets as over an abandoned gold-rush town.

The jungle still lies rich and waiting along the transisthmian right-of-way. The journey is strange and alluring. But only twenty years ago, along this silent way, rushed those crowding trains with the cargoes of two oceans. The Panama canal grows steadily more profitable. However Mexico may ponder, none can foresee.—New York Herald Tribune.

BYRD IS SAILING HOME.

The first promise of spring softens the air of the northern hemisphere, but down in the Antarctic winter is laying icy fingers on the everlasting snows. So Commander Byrd and his men sing and cheer as the good ship City of New York noses her way out of the Bay of Whales and heads toward home and summer—sweet words for men who have endured a year of nature's worst frigidity.

The world cheers, too, at the news that this brave crew is at last out. A fortnight ago it looked as if they might have to stay another year on the Antarctic barrier. All honor to Captain Melville who has been bucking ice floes for a month. All honor to his stout heart and the stout heart of his sturdy ship.

Glory waits Commander Byrd and his men when their steer into their home port with the South pole in their locker. But they'll have no happier day than Wednesday when they embarked for home, their quest successfully completed.

The flag is hauled down at Little America, but two monuments stand there to the new era of exploring—the radio mast and the airplane that carried Byrd to the pole. There they'll stand through the dark of Antarctic winters and the dazzling sun of Antarctic summers till the zealous gales tear them to pieces, raging at the impudence of puny men who defied their domination of the land of utter cold.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Aristarchus.

BY ARCHIBALD HENDERSON.

The name of Aristarchus will always be held in honor. For it was he who discovered that the earth revolves around the sun. In his day this was no mean achievement. Imagine all astronomical knowledge blotted out, and picture yourself waking up tomorrow morning with the resolve to discover the center of the universe. The earth beneath your feet would be firm and apparently motionless; the globe on which you lived would appear to be the center of all things; the sun, the moon, and the lesser luminaries would all appear to rise, to set and circle about a fixed center, the earth.

Aristarchus—310-230 B. C.—boldly questioned such a belief. His predecessor, Heraclides, had discovered that the earth revolves about its own axis, and had even described the orbital movements of Mercury and Venus about the sun. But it was left for Aristarchus to arrive at the conclusion that the earth revolves in an orbit around the sun. It is not known how Aristarchus arrived at this conclusion. It may have been a conviction based upon solid grounds or only a lucky speculation. Unfortunately, only one work of his is extant, entitled "On the Sizes and Distances of the Sun and Moon;" and there is no mention in his work of the anticipation, by Aristarchus, of the cosmogony proposed by Copernicus.

In a book, "The Sand Reckoner," written by Archimedes, who was twenty-five years younger than Aristarchus, much light is thrown upon the theories of the latter in the following meaningful passage:

"He supposes that the fixed stars and the sun are immovable, but that the earth is carried round the sun in a circle which is in the middle of the course; but the sphere of the fixed stars, lying with the sun round the same center, is of such a size that the circle, in which he supposes the earth to move, has the same ratio to the distance of the fixed stars as the center of the sphere has to the surface. But this is evidently impossible, for as the center of the sphere has no magnitude, it follows that it has no ratio to the surface. It is therefore to be supposed that Aristarchus meant that as we consider the earth as the center of the world, then the earth has the same ratio to that which we call the world, as the sphere in which is the circle, described by the earth according to him, has to the sphere of the fixed stars."

We are indebted to Plutarch for another reference to Aristarchus, which confirms the fact that Aristarchus taught the theory associated with his name. Plutarch refers to an opinion that Aristarchus "ought to be accused of impiety for moving the hearth of the world, as the man in order to save the phenomena supposed that the heavens stand still and the earth moves in an oblique circle at the same time as it turns round its axis."

Aristarchus adopted an ingenious method for endeavoring to ascertain relatively the distances of the sun and moon. He tried to estimate the angular distance between the two bodies when the moon is just half illuminated. In that position, the lines joining sun, earth and moon form a right angle at the moon. Aristarchus found the result to be twenty-nine-thirtieths of a right angle, which differs from the true result by only seventeen five hundred and fortieths. This was a fairly good result, considering that Aristarchus had no trigonometry at his disposal. But in the computations of the distances he erred grievously, making the sun about eighteen or twenty times as far from us as the moon.

In the "Book of Popular Science" it is stated regarding Aristarchus and his correct theory of the revolution of the earth about the sun: "There is little doubt that in his own time, and by the immediately succeeding generations of astronomers, the bold conception by which Aristarchus anticipated Copernicus was received with general incredulity, if not with horror."—Copyright, 1930, International Feature Service, Inc.

IBERIA ONCE CENTER OF COLLEGE ACTIVITY

History Records Educational Center of Years Ago

ning a reputation as an educational center and young men came from no small distance to attend the seminary.

Pass Up Railroad

When the time came to lay out the routing for the new railroad, the village of Iberia was in time a spot on the company's map. However, so one story goes, those who had the interests of the college at heart and its government in their hands, decided that to have the trains rushing pell mell through its environs at all hours of the day and night, would disturb the otherwise peaceful and cultural atmosphere of the place, and bade the promoters of the industry be on their way. Only too glad were the inhabitants of Galion, then a village of less importance than Iberia, to welcome the railroad, both as a station and terminal. From that time on the village, as far as any mark of industrial progress goes, stood still.

The seminary, which was started by Preacher Blaney of the Presbyterian denomination, continued, and with the erection of the college, the village still had some prospects of becoming a center of learning. The life of both institutions was comparatively short lived, however, for attendance at the seminary began to dwindle and both buildings were eventually turned over to the state as working homes for the blind. According to arrangements when the buildings ceased to be used for the blind they were to be again used for educational purposes. The state used the buildings for a few years and then gave them up.

Publishes Paper

According to some both buildings were destroyed by fire in the '80's while others maintain that the building which now houses the grades of the Iberia centralized school is the original seminary through whose halls the dainty feet of the girls of 1890 and '60 were wont to tread.

The college will be remembered as being the place where President Harding went to school and received his diploma. It might have been that there he began his newspaper career, for President Harding and the late Frank Miller, of Mt. Gilead, were the publishers of a college paper, "The Spectator," published once a month for the small sum of 25 cents for the school year.

There are a number of the older residents of Iberia and the vicinity, as well as several in Marion and elsewhere who have vivid recollections of the days when Iberia was a college town. All remember President Harding and have only the deepest love and respect for the man who never forgot his old friends and who restored to them their postoffice, even if they do have to drive a few miles to St. James to get "the mail."

One of the number who attended Iberia college when the late President Harding did and who has kept in touch with affairs of civic interest, is C. C. Vannatta who has always lived in the village and vicinity, and who for 25 years conducted a general store at Iberia. Mr. Vannatta served two terms as clerk of the courts of Morrow county, and for the last 10 years has kept young by associating with the boys and girls of the school, as custodian of the buildings.

The grade school stands near the site of the old college, and a part of the foundation of the old building is still traceable. The high school building is located near the street.

THE Radio Corporation of America, in trying to buy from Germany's government a 51 per cent control of German moving picture rights, offers twice the price fixed for the 51 per cent. That would mean eight million dollars cash profit for the Reich.

Mr. Young's intelligent idea is to operate inside the German tariff lines and take the curse off certain German regulations.

Similarly, Mr. Sloan, head of General Motors, has been buying the biggest German motor plant, inside the German tariff, and Ford is building plants inside those lines.

HOOVER OPPOSED TO EXCESSIVE DUTIES

President Revealed as Favoring Protecting of Wage Scales

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22—President Hoover favors moderately higher duties on all American products now coming into direct and unfavorable competition with cheaper foreign goods but is opposed to a level of rates which would tend to monopolize home markets for American goods.

This explanation of the presidential attitude toward the pending tariff bill was given International News Service today by a high administration leader, who enjoys President Hoover's confidence. This leader said the president believes in protective tariff principles but disagrees with the methods followed by house Republican in applying them to the present bill.

The president was pictured as favoring the maintenance of rates high enough to protect the American wage scales in industries that compete directly ith foreign products. He was revealed too as opposing such increases as might tend to shut out foreign products entirely but wished a bill that would place American industries upon an economic equality with foreign producers while continuing in American markets.

MAY URGE REPEAL OF ARIZONA DEATH LAW

Mrs. Eva Duggan's Hanging Declared To Have Been Bungled

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 22—Eva Duggan's hanging at the Arizona State prison at Florence, declared in a statement by former Prison Warden Robert P. Sims, to have been bungled, today precipitated what was expected to be a statewide demand for Arizona's second abolition of capital punishment.

Sims declared that inasmuch as the Arizona law decrees hanging, the death of Mrs. Duggan by virtual decapitation in the death house, probably was illegal.

The former warden attributed the "atrocious horror" to inexperience of the prison officials.

Mrs. Duggan was executed yesterday for the murder of A. J. Mathis, elderly rancher, whose housekeeper she had been.

Arizona repealed its capital punishment provisions by initiative and referendum in November, 1916, and after a "chapter of horrors" caused by a sudden increase in murders, reinstated the hanging law at the election held in November, 1918.

SAYS HE BEAT WIFE, DISMEMBERED BODY

Miner Confesses to Brutal Murder While Being Intoxicated

SCRANTON, Pa., Feb. 22—A confession to the brutal murder of his wife and dismemberment of her body in an effort to hide traces of the crime was blurted out to state police this afternoon by Gervie Castner, 32-year-old miner, according to officers at the Wyoming barracks here where Castner is being held.

Castner was arrested while in a drunken stupor late yesterday shortly after the butchered body of his 28-year-old wife had been found in two blood-saturated burlap sacks in the cellar of their modest home in Avoca, near here.

In announcing the confession this afternoon, state police said Castner, who had been drinking steadily for a week, admitted beating the woman to death in a drunken rage and then using a carpenter's saw to sever the limbs from her body.

The mineworker still was so sodden with drink this afternoon that police were unable to learn from his lips when the murder was committed. Deputy Coroner H. Hurler, in a post-mortem examination of the woman's mangled remains, placed the time of death as two or three days ago.

RATS ON DISPLAY

One Fed Properly Gains Weight, Other One Loses

The two tiny white rats that Miss Esther Tress, school nutritionist, is feeding on proper and improper diets to show school children the value of correct diet, were placed in the windows of the H. O. Crawbough Hardware Co., this morning and will be left there on exhibition until Monday morning.

When Miss Tress received the two rats they both weighed two ounces. Now, the rat that has been fed on meat, potatoes, bread, butter and sugar, weighs two and a quarter ounces, and the rat that was fed on vegetables, fruits and milk, plus the meat, potatoes, bread, butter and sugar weighs three ounces.

Hoover Pays Honor to Covered Wagon Days

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 — By executive proclamation, President Hoover today set aside the period from April 10 to Dec. 29 of this year in commemoration of the hundredth anniversary of the covered wagon days.

It was on April 10, 1830, that the first wagon train left St. Louis for Oregon, pioneering the way for the thousands of men and women who settled the Pacific states.

JUSTICES USE BUS LAW AS NEW RACKET

Cleveland Auto Club Opens Drive Against Latest Court "Swindle"

CLEVELAND, Feb. 22—A statewide campaign to stop a new "racket" that county justices of the peace and their enforcement officers are alleged to have devised for mulcting unsuspecting motorists, was gotten under way here today by the Cleveland Automobile club.

The "swindle" as it is classified by Paul Marshall, chief counsel for the club, is the arrest of motor vehicle owners on the charge of passing a standing school bus outside the limits of a municipality.

Complaints filed with Marshall allege that a number of township constables and their deputies arrest and hail before the nearest justice of the peace all drivers who pass school buses as they stand by the road neither taking on nor discharging passengers.

The N. S. C. class was chosen by the Young People's class, of the Forest Lawn Presbyterian church, as its permanent name at a meeting and potluck supper Friday night at the Legion dugout. It was also decided that social meetings be held only once a month instead of every two weeks. After a business meeting games and contests were enjoyed.

AN antique setting will lend an attractive background for the antique quaker tea to be given by the Art and Marion Lecture-Recital clubs at the home of Mrs. Walter E. Hane, East Center st., Monday afternoon between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock.

Part of the program will be given in costume suggestive of quaker days. Truitt Brown, of Kenton, probably one of the most popular tenors of the state, will be the guest artist for the tea. Mrs. Bertram Myers, Miss Janet Trott and Miss Mary Heininger, dressed as Quakers, will open the program with a vocal trio number, which will include quaker songs. Mr. Brown will then offer a group of selections, followed by a melodian solo by Miss Mary Heininger. Mrs. E. H. Morgan, a member of the Art club, has prepared an interesting talk on "Antiques Which Have Interested Me" and will exhibit some fine antiques which have been in the possession of her family for some time. Miss Janet Trott, soprano, will sing a vocal number, "The Quaker Girl," followed by the second group of songs by Truitt Brown. Mrs. W. E. Orcutt will read several poems by John Greenleaf Whittier, who was considered a quaker poet. A vocal duet by Mrs. Karl W. Schell and Truitt Brown, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Harold K. Mouser, will close the program.

The programs will be repeated twice during the afternoon and at 5 o'clock tea will be served by a committee.

Just Things

BY EDNA S. DUTTON

Spring

June days may be rare but the brand of weather which has fallen to our lot for the last few days strikes me as being about the last word in winter atmosphere. And do folks take advantage of it? If you were abroad during the spell you certainly noted that they took to it like the proverbial duck to water. Complexions betrayed the sit-by-the-fire gentry and the timid way in which the wee ones progressed up the avenue gave one an inkling as to where they were when the mercury hovered around the zero mark. Garter snakes, first robins and even a pair of bees were reported as having taken advantage of the sunshine. But the fly in the ointment was the guy or female of the species, who in one breath lauded the weatherman, but ruined the praise in the next by gasping, "but will it hold up?" when they knew there wasn't a chinaman's chance that it would.

Visitors

The world doesn't seem so large and really Marion seems quite cosmopolitan when one considers the visitors we have within our gates. No matter what language we speak, or how little we understand or agree with the other fellow, there is one trait we have in common and that is our quest for food. A popular restaurant within a period of less than a week had in their list of patrons two Russians, a Bulgarian and a Japanese, all business men of the highest type and all interested in garnering all they could in regard to the country.

Superstitions

Do you believe in signs? Morbid ones like the following: if there is one death in a community there will be three; the third serious sickness will be fatal; it is bad luck for three to light a cigar or cigaret on the same match; if you break a dish or other article you will break three before the spell is broken. In spite of what one chooses to regard as their better judgement lady luck seems to deal her hands that way, don't you think?

n Andrew misinterpreted. He "Don't send Merriam down to e me any further demonstration; n I'm ready to buy I'll get in with him."

It might be better if—if you call that you get in touch with me; Mr. Merriam may not be with us." Real t was in his voice now; not about Merriam, and John Andrew understood that Pete was shortly to be separated, but about John Andrew himself. "May I be frank with you, Mr. Kellogg?" Henderson went on. I'm not blaming you at all; it was a good scheme. Merriam knew we were about through with him. He brings you in as a prospect, and we keep him on 30 days more, until we discover that you aren't going to buy a car from us. 'A good scheme, and it almost caught me. There aren't any hard feelings about it, but—a forty-nine hundred and eighty dollar custom built prospect should have sent his clothes to the tailor oftener.'

"You just think I'm pulling a bluff, eh?" John Andrew laughed. I've been accused of that before—once. Well, let it go, think whatever you will. How much will it cost to fix that fender?"

"That comes out of Merriam's commissions for the month."

John Andrew glanced at his friend; old Pete, with a wife and youngsters and rent to pay and the fibrous remainder of stripped round steak for dinner. He saw, and recognized misery, but his lips closed tightly, and all he said was, "Don't do that; It's really on me. I've a deal on which—"

"Ah—those deals!"

Kellogg laughed ruefully, but said "Why not take a chance on it? Keep Merriam on for a month; after that whether the deal goes through or not, I'll buy your car."

"Why not now, then, if you're determined to have a Mercury?"

"I can't explain," John Andrew snapped.

It wasn't his pride, exactly, which was being hurt; it wasn't entirely the dejected appearance of Merriam. All of John Andrew's life was rising in protest to a situation entirely different to any he had ever been in.

John Andrew said in a cold voice, "I'll take the car just as soon as you put on a new fender and tighten the brakes." And would have given anything to get the words back; he hadn't actually spoken. Something had forced him to speak, had put the words where they slid out of his mouth.

Indecision spread subtly over the assistant manager's face and as he watched Kellogg fill out a check he said, "On New York, eh?"

"Right," John Andrew agreed. "And you can wire the bank in the morning. Have the car at the Pacific as soon as you've fixed the fender and found out the check's good."

He didn't want either gratitude or explanations from Merriam; he didn't want to think about what he'd done.

Whatever John Andrew thought in the cab, as he was driven to the hotel, was so jumbled, so bitterly accusing, and yet at the same time curiously satisfying that he was still confused as he went to the desk for his key. The room clerk told them that a man was waiting for him; the elderly man sitting over by the tubbed palms. John Andrew, still in a cold sort of daze, obeyed as if the clerk's words had been an order, and asked automatically: "You wanted me?"

"You're Mr. Kellogg, sir? You had an advertisement in tomorrow's paper—that is, you will have one in when it comes out?"

"Tomorrow?" John Andrew asked; then, wearily, "I suppose I will." Blankly, he added, "Why?"

"I—I came here, sir, intruding—I was told—a friend of my daughter told me—you see——"

"I don't see anything," Kellogg snapped. "I don't want to see anything. I'm blind as a bat." Glancing as if for the first time at the old man, he went on more gently, "Excuse me—what is it you want?"

John Andrew stopped him with a gesture; he needed no figuring to realize what $1,950 from $5,000 left him in his New York account—the money which was to be doubled within 30 days. "I'm afraid I'm not interested in inventions now," he said. "He did not lie, and said, "I can't give you the money, no matter how good it is."

The old man stood up. "I'm sorry, too," he said. "The materials are so costly, but only a couple of hundred more—I've got all the plans, and the machine is almost completed—perhaps a couple of hundred—I wouldn't really need several thousand dollars, sir—but if you can't, you can't."

"That's very good sense," said John Andrew. He found himself gazing at the old man's stained fingers; a darker color than the jatakin brought by excessive cigarets.

What could be done with a couple of hundred? Make it grow twentyfold, and become ten thousand? Why not be the complete fool?

"Did you ever read Little Black Sambo?" John Andrew asked, less miserably than he felt. His shabbily dressed companion shook his head. "'Why, so I will,' said the tiger," quoted John Andrew, as closely as he could.

"Will what, sir?"

John Andrew beckoned to a boy, and asked for several sheets of hotel stationery. "This is going to make my fortune, isn't it?" he said. "I knew it would. I can let you have three hundred. That help any?"

In amazement the old man said, "I might be able to have the machine in working order for that. I've already submitted the plans, but I haven't heard about them yet. You—you're going to——"

"I don't know how to do it legally," John Andrew said. "We'll have to trust each other about that. We'll just write that—what's your name? that 'William Blake and J. A. Kellogg, in consideration of the sum of $300 furnished by Kellogg to Blake, are to share equally in all profits accruing from the invention of Blake.' How's that?"

"If I need a little more cash to get the machine ready——"

"We'll write that in, also: 'and J. A. Kellogg further agrees to furnish additional capital if necessary to complete said machine, up to'—say a thousand?—'one thousand dollars.'" He signed his name, and handed the agreement to Blake.

"I haven't told you what my apparatus is designed for," the old man said, signing also, and taking the bills Kellogg gave him. "I've brought the plans, and——"

John Andrew took the sheets which Blake offered him, and stuffed them into his coat pocket. "Look into it when I have time," he said. "Is it a perpetual motion machine? No? Thank heaven for that."

The old man stood, and said timidly, "My daughter laughs at me for being careless, sir, but—you're putting your good money into this; don't you want me to explain how my machine will work?"

John Andrew was very tired of everything, and said shortly, "I'll get that from the plans."

"What will I do when the machine is ready, sir? Send it here? Or——"

"I'll be at——," he named a Los Angeles hotel; "you let me know when it's done. Then——"

The old man's eyes drew together, and a curious expression, of mingled cupidity, fear, and hope, came into them. "You know what it is!" he said.

"I know it isn't a perpetual motion machine," John Andrew said wearily; "and perhaps it will turn out to be one after all. It's getting late; run along home before you get your feet wet."

A Wife's Triumph Over Jealousy

Harry's Sporting Attitude to the Savarin Gift Relieves Lillian's Anxiety

AT DICKY'S [illegible] as to the "program" we had worked out, Harry Underwood clapped me lightly on the shoulder. "Run along up to Lil," he said affectionately. "I'll interview this husband of yours, or rather, kindly permit him to interview me. [illegible] I have reason for haste."

A glance from the door to which I had hurried at Mr. Underwood's injunction showed me the two men tramping toward the orchard in comradely fashion. There was a fallen tree at the further end which made a delightful seat in summer, and which I guessed was their objective upon this mild winter day. There was something in the set of the elder man's massive squared shoulders which assured me that whatever Dicky's objections might be to Lillian's visit to dying Robert Savarin, and to my accompanying her, they would be vanquished by Harry's eloquence.

As I neared Lillian's door, however, I realized that, after all, I had taken much for granted when I was talking to my friend's husband. Robert Savarin had not put his wish to see Lillian once more into words. Neither had she said directly that she felt she must go to see the man who had loved her so deeply and so hopelessly. Suppose I had been mistaken in the look she had given me!

But when I had tapped upon her door, had heard her faint "Come in," and had seen the strained anxiety in her eyes when I entered, my fears fell away from me, and when I had locked the door behind me, I answered the question which I guessed she was afraid to voice.

"Harry was wonderful, dearest," I said quickly, "so sympathetic and comprehending."

"Oh!" Just the monosyllable, but explosive in its relief. "I was so afraid he——"

"I know," I told her, "and I do not mean that he wasn't a bit upset at first, he wouldn't be the man he is and tremendously in love with you as he is—if he took news like this lightly. But it didn't take him long to have it out with himself, and he surely emerged with banners."

Lillian's Relief

"Did he read Robert's letter?" she said in low abashed tones. "I called after you, but you had gone beyond my voice. I should not have sent that letter to Harry."

"He refused to read it," I said, "but after I had told him everything, I made him read one paragraph—this." I held out the letter to her, folded as I had given it to her husband. "Perhaps I am wrong, but I have the feeling that Robert would not object to his reading that part—that—perhaps—he secretly hoped Harry might read it."

Her eyes leaped to mine, startled. "So you thought that, too," she said, and I nodded.

"It doesn't matter what Robert thought when he penned those words," I went on. "The only important thing now is his joy when he hears what has come of that reading. Can you guess the message your husband has sent to you, dearest?"

There was no vestige of color in her face, and her lips were stiff as she said: "Tell me, quickly!"

"He's coming shortly to you, to say it all himself," I told her, "but he wanted me to tell you that he wished you to go to Robert Savarin, not once but as many times as you saw fit, and to stay as long as he needed you. And—I am going with you."

She swayed slightly, and put out her hand gropingly, as if she could not see me. I caught it between mine and drew her to me.

"We Start Today"

"Steady, old dear!" I said, making my voice prosaic. "We must start today, you know—there is no use in delaying things, and I must see to everything before I go, for we cannot tell just how long we may be gone."

"Today?" she echoed inquiringly, and I saw that until she had pulled herself together, I must plan and decide for her. The emotional strain of the last hour had been too much for her. She was numbed, dazed, almost incapable of coherent thought.

"Yes, today," I answered, "but you don't have to think of a thing. Lie down now, until Harry comes up to talk to you. He's out with Dicky now, outlining to my husband the reasons why he should stay at the farmhouse while I am gone. I'll arrange everything and we'll start for the city in an hour. We'll stay at the hotel tonight and start before daybreak for the Catskills. We'll get there before noon tomorrow."

"Tomorrow!" she echoed, and there was in her voice a poignant fear that we might be too late.

"Perhaps we may go on tonight," I said. "I'll see what Harry says. Or suppose you ask him."

"No, no," she shrank away from my clasp. "You—talk to him."

"All right," I returned laconically. "Come now, lie down."

I led her to the bed as if she were a child ready for a nap, and tucked her in. Then I opened a window.

"Don't you dare get up, not even for Harry, until I come back. I'll let you know when it's time to start on our journey."

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

TODAY was Saturday and was Washington's birthday, and like my unkle said it would be it was a holiday, because it came on Saturday, the dirty crook. I don't mean George Washington, but my unkle. I let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth, and I was glad it was going to be a nice day, because I wanted to go to the peerade, and if it wasn't a nice day there might not be a peerade. When I was at the table feeding my face they were talking 'bout George Washington, and my ant said it was a proud thing to be the father of a country, and I asted if that was all he was father of, and she said that it was as far as she knew, but she wouldn't trust these men, and my grandfather said he thought she was safe, and she said if she couldn't eat breakfast without being insulted she would go to her room, and my mother said, "That dodge would be all right on most any day but this, Nancy, but you'll have to omit it this time and help me do the dishes. I want to go to the perade, too." My ant looked at my father and he looked out of the window, and then my ant started to get up, and then she sat down again, and then she told my mother that she was always glad to help her do the housework, and my mother said maybe she was and maybe she wasn't, but this time she'd be glad to have her.

Just then the girls came and they were going to the peerade. I told my father that I bet if George wasn't the father of anything but his country he didn't keep no cows, and my father asted me what I was driving at, and I said a country couldn't milk cows, and he told me to stop my nonsense.

We were all supprized when the peerade came along. There was a man on an old dray mare, then there was my grandfather and some other real old men setting in an auto, and then there was a lot of fellas that fit in the spinach war and then there was the fellas that fit in the last war, and there were bands playing and a lot of red cross nurses singing, and all the old men in the auto chewing tobacco and spitting, and then I saw the Lost Bag of Tripe, just as he saw me and he didn't look where he was going and ran right into the bunch of nurses and I ducked into the crowd, and he stopped the peerade, and a fat nurse spanked him and a policeman got him by the collar and yanked him through the crowd and let him go, and we all liked the peerade and was proud of my grandfather, and he came home at night as happy as he could be, and my father said he was all lit up. I would like to be the father of a country or something.
